Celia C. Peters is a visionary filmmaker bringing a new voice to the American science fiction genre and discourse. Ms. Peters filmmaker credits include narrative short film, documentary shorts and experimental short film, with screenings in New York, Washington, D.C., Detroit, Columbus and London. She is currently producing her afrofuturist sci-fi feature film project, Godspeed and fantasy web series entitled Allevon.

She is also a pioneering curator of film and visual art who creates innovative, inclusive futurist programming.

Ms. Peters is an honors graduate of University Michigan with a B.A. in French and Political Science; she holds an M.A. in Public Policy from the University of Chicago and has done graduate work in Clinical Psychology at New York University.

Celia is... Creative. Credible. Captivating. Compelling.

- Member of the New York Women in Film & Television and WGA
- Board Member of the Greater Columbus Film Commission
- Silent sci-fi short film "MISSION" awarded a 2017 post-production residency at the acclaimed Wexner Center for the Arts
- Sci-fi short "Roxë15" completed in 2017 and screened at 2017 Afropunk Festival
- Feature-length script Roxë15 was selected for CultivEight 2015, an NEA-sponsored film development incubator
- Experimental short "FIOFY (Figure It Out for Yourself)" was created for Conjuration, a 2012 Jean-Michel Basquiat tribute show in NYC; it also screened in the 2013 Festival of Art and Music Revolution in London, UK
- 2012 writer-in-residence at Hawthornden International Retreat for Writers in Scotland, UK

Celia has a unique gift for connecting with her audiences and ensuring they walk away provoked to think and inspired to act.
